

Social and Personal

Alfred Partridge, Klotz, of Baltimore, is the guest of Captain and Mrs. Joseph E. Willard at their home on West Franklin Street, and a number of affairs are being given in his honor. Mr. Klotz is a famous portrait painter, having executed a portrait of Cardinal Gibbons and a number of other distinguished men. He is in Richmond at present to paint a portrait of Hon. Lippa Hutton, Jr.

Mrs. Klotz, who is now visiting her sister, Miss Elizabeth Boone, at her cottage at Vinton, Va., will be in the Avenue Marceau, Paris, where Mr. Klotz will join her later.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, South Ocean Avenue, Freeport, L. I., when Miss Claudia Miles Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miles Collier, was married to Captain Percy Montague, Jr., of this city. The ceremony took place at half-past 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, November 6, and was celebrated by Dr. A. W. E. Carrington, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration. The bride was given away by her father. She is one of the leading members of Freeport society and is well known in Memphis and Richmond.

Miss Alice Collier was maid of honor and Misses Marie Kolner and Marion Montague, of this city, were bridesmaids. W. Neville Montague, Jr., of Baltimore, was the best man, and W. C. Blanton, of Richmond, and William Collier, of Freeport, were groomsmen. A handsome reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Montague left in an automobile for New York, and from there will go to Boston and Atlantic City, later making their home at 1317 Grove Avenue, Richmond.

Among the Richmond guests at the wedding were Mrs. David A. Alnall, Mrs. James Taylor Robinson, Miss Marion Lee Montague, and Miss Mary Lee Montague. Among the wedding gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Montague were a very handsome silver service, presented by "C" Company of the Richmond Light Infantry Regiment, of which the groom is captain.

Captain Howard G. Davis, Ninth Infantry, United States Army, and Mrs. Davis, of Fort Snelling, Minn., are the guests of Mrs. Davis's mother, Mrs. Dabney J. Carr, at 1429 Park Avenue. Captain and Mrs. Davis have just returned from the Philippine Islands and expect to be in Richmond for some weeks. Mrs. Davis is most pleasantly remembered in Richmond as Miss Anna Carr before her marriage to Captain Davis.

The following officers and board members were elected for the ensuing year: Secretary, L. L. when Miss Claudia Miles Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miles Collier, was married to Captain Percy Montague, Jr., of this city. The ceremony took place at half-past 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, November 6, and was celebrated by Dr. A. W. E. Carrington, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration. The bride was given away by her father. She is one of the leading members of Freeport society and is well known in Memphis and Richmond.

The dates for the Germans have not yet been decided upon, and the list of chapters for the dances will be given in every detail. The Germans will be given either in the ballroom of the Masonic Temple or the Richmond Hotel, and members of the club will be limited to sixty.

In the midst of a bower of flowers and marked by a pretty ceremony, Miss Mary Lewis Fry was married to Pierce Christie Rucker Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church, in Greensboro, N. C. The wedding was witnessed by an immense gathering of Greensboro society which overflowed the church doors. Immediately afterwards an informal reception was given by the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fry, at their home, 248 North Elm Street, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Rucker left for New York and Canada on a two weeks' wedding trip. They will be at home after December 16, at 422 North Elm Street.

Immediately before the arrival of the bride party at the church a musical program was rendered, with Miss Margaret Hall, organist, the number being Nuptial March, by Alexander Gullman; Intermezzo, by James H. Rogers; Barcarolle, from "Tales of Hoffman," by the party appeared Mrs. W. H. Stone, Jr., sang "Not Because Thy Heart is Mine" by Herman Larr.

The ushers were: Messrs. Tucker Gentry, Albert Woodard, George Jarman and Ernest Gentry. Van Garth, a brother of the groom, was best man. The bride entered the church with her maid of honor, Miss Janie Wilhoit, of Charlottesville, who wore a frock of cream-colored serge with

The bridesmaids were: Miss Annie Fry, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Burwell, of Chase City, dressed in pink with court trains, carrying pink chrysanthemums and wearing white alightes. The bridesmaids were: Miss Annie Fry, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Burwell, of Chase City, dressed in pink with court trains, carrying pink chrysanthemums and wearing white alightes.

The bride entered on her father's arm, who gave her away, and at the altar they met the bridegroom, who entered from the pastor's study with his brother, A. C. Rucker, of Union, N. Y. She wore a lovely dress of white satin, trimmed in Duchess lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

The wedding occurred before an altar of green and white, in which were a profusion of palms and white chrysanthemums. Papers were hanging about the altar. The vows were read in the presence of Dr. Melton Clark, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Thomas G. Franklin, rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Rucker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fry, of 430 North Elm Street, New York, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rucker, of Columbia, S. C., and is a member of the cotton brokerage firm of Hedgcock and Rucker, of Greensboro.

The out-of-town guests present were: Mrs. Houston Rucker, mother of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rucker, brother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Rucker, of Columbia, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Overby, of Danville, Va.; Mrs. J. Allison Hedgcock and Miss Eugene Hedgcock, of Richmond; Miss Emma Jefferson, of Chase City; Miss Shirley Montgomery, of Concord.

The bride has several times visited Mrs. Hedges in Richmond, and has a great many friends here. She is a member of the Cotton Brokers' Association of Richmond, and will be a very interesting event.

The big benefit performance to be given under the direction of the board of managers of the Retreat for the Sick at the Empire Theatre will take place on Thursday afternoon, November 14, instead of to-morrow, as originally planned. The entertainment will be given under the patronage of some of the most prominent society women in Richmond, and will be a very interesting event.

The regular meeting of the Chesapeake Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was held on Thursday, November 7, at the home of Mrs. George Smith. The meeting was opened with prayer, and was followed by the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and a report of the committee from the county club. This report was read by the chairman, and was followed by the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and a report of the committee from the county club.

matters. Reports were then heard from the treasurer, the delegates from the State convention held in Harrisonburg recently, and from the Arlington Monument Fund.

A committee was appointed to secure a place in which to hold the chapter meetings, and it was contributed to the Soldiers' Home dinner. Visitors from Chester were Mrs. R. H. Bruce, Miss Rowlett and Mrs. A. J. Hurt, who is a member of the chapter.

After adjournment and the conclusion of the business session, members present were entertained very delightfully by plant hosts, and a social hour followed.

At a previous meeting Mrs. J. M. Gregory and Mrs. Walter P. Allen were elected delegates to the Washington convention, with Mrs. George Paul and Mrs. C. H. Dorsett as alternates.

Approaching Marriage. Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Woodward have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Anne Hinckman, to David D. Eanes, the ceremony to take place on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride, 2330 East Grace Street.

For Mrs. Wall.

Says the Baltimore News of recent issue: "Mrs. John Hyatt Wright has issued invitations to a luncheon to be given on Thursday, November 21, at her residence, 1002 North Charles Street, in honor of her sister, Mrs. Axel Machlason and Mrs. Garrett Wall, of Richmond."

Rev. and Mrs. Durham. The new pastor of the First Baptist Church, in Roanoke, and Mrs. Durham were at home Thursday afternoon and evening from 3 to 4 o'clock, to their friends and the members of the congregation at the handsome home of Judge and Mrs. W. J. Hanson, 1001 South Roanoke Street. The rooms were decorated with potted plants and flowers. Large vases of long-stemmed chrysanthemums were used effectively in the reception hall, the two parlors and the library, while in the dining room the table was exquisite with its lace cover and large vase of American Beauty roses.

During the hours of the reception the rooms were filled with visitors. Many ministers and their wives called to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Durham to Roanoke, while almost the entire congregation attended this informal at home.

Rev. and Mrs. Durham have made their home in Richmond for the past several years and have only recently moved to Roanoke to live.

A pretty marriage took place last Wednesday morning at half-past 9 o'clock in the Baptist Church, in Hillsboro, when Miss Beatrice Virginia Gentry became the bride of William Anderson Garth, of North Carolina. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peyton L. Little, and an elaborate musical program was rendered by the guests were assembling by Miss Ethel Gentry, of Crozet. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played at the entry of the bride party and the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as a recessional.

The ushers were Messrs. Tucker Gentry, Albert Woodard, George Jarman and Ernest Gentry. Van Garth, a brother of the groom, was best man. The bride entered the church with her maid of honor, Miss Janie Wilhoit, of Charlottesville, who wore a frock of cream-colored serge with

PRINCE AZIZ HASSAN IS COWARD ON FIELD

First Scion of Reigning House in Modern Times to Show White Feather.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY. PRINCE AZIZ HASSAN, of Egypt, enjoys the distinction of being the first scion of a reigning house, at any rate in modern times, to have shown the white feather on the battlefield, and to be placed under arrest—perhaps by this time he is cowardly when in the face of the enemy. For by his conduct at Kerkirissa he precipitated the Turkish rout, was captured by high Turkish officers at a considerable distance from the scene of action when in full flight and was brought by them back to Constantinople, with a view to his being brought before a court-martial.

That a man with his unsavory record should have been entrusted by the Ottoman authorities with the command of the cavalry in the battle of Kerkirissa seems well-nigh incredible, more especially when it is recalled that his father, the late Prince Hassan, of Egypt, younger brother of Khedive Tewfik, was uniformly defeated during the Turkish war against the Balkan states and Russia from 1876 to 1877, during which he figured at the head of a mixed Egyptian and Turkish division. Prince Aziz, who is a first cousin of the Khedive, received his military training in the First Regiment of Dragoon Guards at Berlin. He did not succeed in making friends with his comrades, owing to his morose and arrogant disposition, and ultimately became involved in all sorts of queer financial scrapes, which culminated in his taking to flight in order to escape the consequences. Emperor William was so angry that he took no steps to prevent the publication in the "Official Gazette" of an announcement to the effect that the prince was an absconding debtor and a deserter. Warrants were issued for his arrest, and not long afterwards a notification appeared to the effect that his connection with the German army had been severed.

Subsequently his mother effected a settlement with his creditors, and started him off again with a clean bill of health. Returning to Cairo, he became involved in a squabble with one of his brothers-in-law, Prince Fuad Pasha, which ended in a shooting affray at the Khedivial Club, in which he was slightly wounded by Fuad, discharging his revolver in a fit of anger. Then he secured permission to join the Seventh Hussars of the English army at Bombay, and served with them until they got tired of his companionship and succeeded in getting rid of him. He afterwards went through the war in Manchuria, attached to a Russian regiment, but without distinguishing himself, and on his return, finding the atmosphere of Cairo uncongenial, he settled down at Constantinople, where he endeavored to promote horse-racing, and eventually succeeded in obtaining a commission as cavalry general.

The only useful thing that he ever did was when, while president of the Automobile Club at Cairo, he drove his motor car from Cairo to Suez, over the old but now abandoned caravan route which runs in a straight line from Cairo to Suez across the desert. It was the route followed by the Anglo-Indian mail in the ante-railroad days, and from 1860 to 1872 there was a line of railroad which stretched across the distance.

Caravan route, post-chaise road and railway were all alike abandoned after the opening of the Suez Canal and the railroad system connected therewith; and the present railroad route from Cairo to Suez, instead of running in a straight line as formerly, now takes a much longer, owing to the fact that the line after leaving Cairo strikes the Suez Canal almost at its very center, and then runs parallel with the distance.

During the course of the proceedings in the London Divorce Court, the legal representative of the royal house of Bourbon obtained permission from the presiding judge to present a declaration on the part of his clients to the effect that the said distant prince had no right whatsoever to the name of Bourbon, or to the title of prince, and that he was not even remotely connected with the family, either legitimately or illegitimately.

I have received during the past five or six years many letters from readers of these articles in all parts of the United States and Canada, asking me for information about the man, and intimating that he was making dupes of people in the localities from which the letters were dated, that it is well that his most recent offense, namely, that of bigamy, should be made widely known against him. If arrested in connection therewith, it will be no new experience, since under the name of the "Duke of Rio Grande" he had some rather stormy experiences in London some ten or twelve years ago. Perhaps the most pathetic feature of his career is his treatment of his unhappy and deluded American wife and her little boy, who is being brought up by her relatives in this country.

CULPEPER NEWS NOTES

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Culpeper, Va., November 10.—During a moving picture performance in the Opera House here Friday evening part of the skylight of the building was blown in by a severe wind, which caused a panic between the hours of 8 and 9, and several children were painfully, though not seriously, hurt by the falling glass, and for a while the panic prevailed, as the hail quickly emptied itself. Several houses near town were reported unroofed in the same storm and a large hay barn was blown over.

Among the transfers of real estate recorded at the Culpeper clerk's office this week was one of bargain and sale by Virginia Brewster Jones and Dr. C. Lester Jones to Charles King Tenning of their estate, "Homestead," on the Hazel River. The property includes the large flour mill, known as the "Mountain Mill." The sale price was $27,000. Another deed recorded was a deed of bargain and sale by S. A. Shadrack and wife to Thomas T. Shadrack, of 120 acres near Cedar Mountain, battlefield, known locally as "Lower Farm." The sale price was not made public.

The Sunday schools of the town, under the auspices of the local branch of W. C. T. U. united in a temperance rally, which was held in the Culpeper Methodist Church at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. E. W. Winfrey, D. D., of the Baptist Church, presided.

George Jamison, of this county, who has been living in Richmond for several years, holding the position of guard at the State Penitentiary there, was badly hurt while spending a few days at his home at Cedar Mountain this week. Mr. Jamison was driving, and the horse becoming frightened and running away, he was thrown out of the buggy and his head struck the ground. He is now recovering at the home of his wife, Mrs. E. W. Winfrey, D. D., of the Baptist Church.
